Foreword

Since inception, INSEC has devoted to two decades on human rights protection and promotion of social justice in Nepal. During this period, It has set many examples in strengthening the human rights movement and promoting a just society by making people aware, and through policy advocacy in coordination and collaboration from the grassroots to the national and international levels.

INSEC has worked with conflict victims of both sides of the decade-long armed conflict for promoting reconciliation by enhancing their knowledge, linking them with government authorities and creating favourable environment at the local level that can serve as a foundation for the conflict victims to seek transitional justice. It has contributed to consolidate democracy by advocating for right to freedom, campaigning for free and fair election and meaningful participation, and by spreading democratic norms and values among the people. INSEC has assisted people in the grassroots to advocate for their rights, and has continuously monitored the situation of human rights and implementation status of national and international human rights instruments to which Nepal is a state party. Its database on the situation of human rights violation and abuses of the past two decades has become a reliable source of information for different national and international stakeholders. Respecting international human rights and humanitarian laws; and their domestication remain its major concerns. In this regard, advocacy for the ratification of ICC, draft bills on the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and Commission on Disappearances is underway. Advocating for ensuring the rights of Human Rights Defenders (HRDs) is another area of intervention. Besides, it has also been advocating for the rights of the marginalized, excluded and disadvantaged people.

Learning from our past experiences and the transitional political situation of the country, we have reviewed our strategy (2009-2013) and incorporated some new areas of interventions to formulate this strategic plan (2013-2018). As the Rights Based Approach (RBA) begins with dutiful and responsible engagement and cooperation of law-abiding citizens, we have incorporated the initiatives making the "Responsibles Responsive" and promoting "Citizen's Code of Conduct". In addition, the economic, social and cultural (ESC) rights along with right of freedom of expression, and rule of law are some other areas of INSEC interventions in the next five years.

I expect, this strategic plan will work as a blueprint and guiding principles for INSEC and donor community to identify intervening areas in compliance with their strategies. Finally, I would like to thank our donor agencies, civil society members, government and non-government bodies, friends and all well-wishers. I thank you all for your commitments, assistance, solidarity and endeavours to support our efforts.

Chairperson

Executive Summary

Since 2003 all activities of INSEC have been guided and shaped by its periodical strategic plans. The period under the Strategy 2008-2013 ends in July 2013, and will be replaced by this new strategy.

Nepal has not yet promulgated a new constitution that was due by in May 27, 2012. However, in the anticipation that there will be a new constitution and a new context thereafter, INSEC, which works on human rights, democracy, peace and social justice, needs to have a plan that supports the democratic transition. This strategy takes into account the necessary interventions that need to be taken in the new context.

The process of preparing this strategic plan started with formal and informal discussions with target groups and concerned grassroots and national level stakeholders. In addition, there were series of consultations with the Executive Committee members of INSEC and also its staff members. This five-year strategy plan 2013-2018 has also incorporated the suggestions and feedbacks provided by funding partners, and external evaluation reports. It was then discussed and adopted by 17th General Assembly of INSEC held in Lalitpur on 6 May 2012.

This plan establishes strategies and directions of INSEC in relation to the required interventions to protect and promote human rights, democracy and peace for social justice in Nepal and to enhance institutional development during the period 2013-2018.

Core areas of intervention

1. Monitoring/documentation
2. Awareness and capacity development
3. Advocacy (National and international level)

Key crosscutting areas of concern

To comply with the changing political scenario of the country and around the world, INSEC has identified the following concerns for the next five years:

1. Rule of law, peace and human security
2. Good governance and democratization
3. Freedom of Expression (FoE)
4. Right to Information (RTI)
5. Development of effective protection plan for Human Rights Defenders (HRDs).
6. Establishment of early warning system based on the database of Nepal Human Rights Yearbook and news portal of INSEC (www.inseconline.org)
7. Economic, Social and Cultural (ESC) rights (RTF, RTE, RTH)
8. Institutional funding for future intervention and sustainability.
9. Gender equality and social inclusion (GESI) and disability
10. Lobbying and advocacy at sub-regional, regional and international level through networks and coalitions.

1. Introduction

- 1.1 Informal Sector Service Centre (INSEC) has been working on human rights and social justice for the past two decades. During the 20 years, it has established itself as a leading, credible, efficient, effective, and reliable national human rights organization in Nepal by collaborating with relevant stakeholders including civil society organizations, government agencies and other national human rights institutions. The track record of INSEC is well documented and widely recognized.
- 1.2 INSEC began for the promotion of economic rights of the cart pushers of Kathmandu Valley in 1989 and was registered as a non-government organisation in 1991. It has come a long way since by involving itself in campaigns, awareness creation and education programmes meant for the promotion of civil and political rights in Nepal. Collection and dissemination of primary information related to human rights has been the main strength of INSEC.
- 1.3 Since 1994, INSEC has been implementing specific HR awareness and capacity development programmes targeting the marginalized people including the Dalits, women, former-kamaiyas, former-haliyas, bonded agricultural labourers and children. These groups have always been the key beneficiaries of all core programmes.
- 1.4 INSEC has been actively involved in facilitation and co-ordination of the programmes organized by civil society in favour of fundamental human rights and democracy. Furthermore, it has been implementing projects for promoting and strengthening democracy within political parties and state institutions, especially after Jana Andolan II (People's Movement) of 2006. During the movement INSEC had coordinated a 'Human Rights Monitoring Team' comprising of human rights institutions and other civil society organisations that was facilitated by the NGO Federation of Nepal.

- 1.5 INSEC has five regional offices, 22 district offices and 75 district representatives throughout the country. Six core programmes and five projects are under implementation throughout the country. Some of these programmes are being implemented with direct participation of people in 27 districts. Furthermore, INSEC has established working relations and linkages with a number of local, national and international initiatives, alliances, coalitions and formal organisations.

2. Background to Strategic Plan

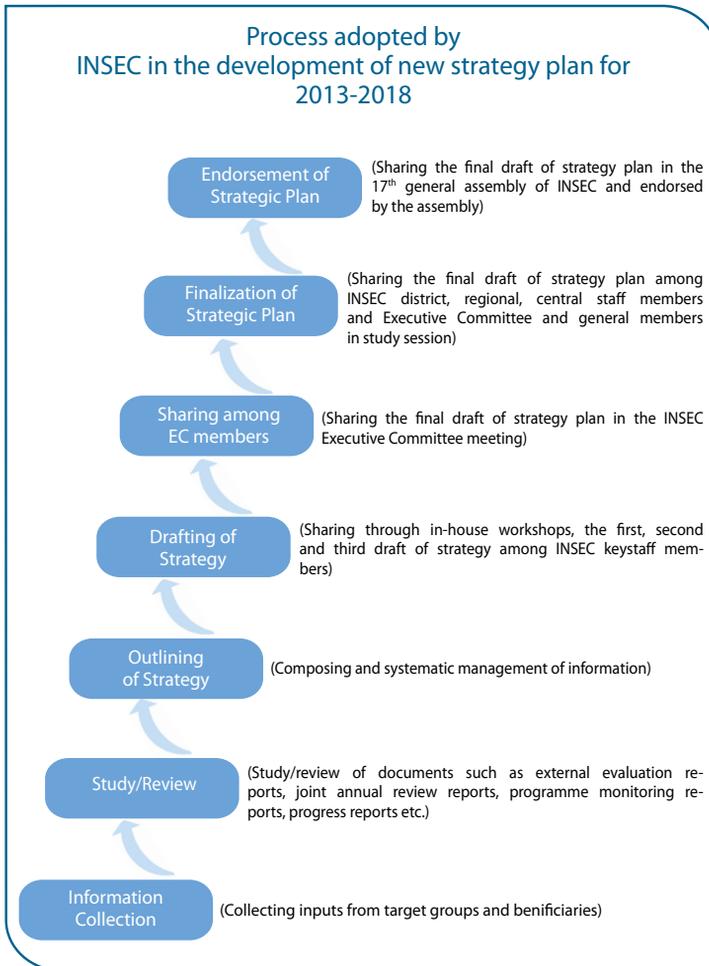

- 2.1 INSEC has been carrying out its programmes and activities based on its periodic strategies. Past experiences have shown that the activities guided by strategic plan can be implemented more effectively and efficiently. The first INSEC strategy was developed in 2007 for three years (INSEC Strategy 2007-2010) and next five-year strategy (INSEC Strategy 2008-2013) is under implementation. At the beginning of 2008, INSEC outlined its core strategies and corresponding actions for the period 2008-2013 based on its previous experiences and the political and human rights situation of the country. Knowledge building, policy advocacy and capacity building of rights defenders and rights claimers remain the core components of its overall strategic framework based on which five strategic areas were embraced. Each of the above strategies has specific objectives and corresponding programmes. The main strategic areas adopted by INSEC were :
- i. Documentation and Dissemination of Human Rights Information
 - ii. Human Rights Education and Awareness
 - iii. Human Rights Monitoring and Advocacy

- iv. Interventions for Peacebuilding and Promoting Democracy
 - v. Institutional Capacity Building

- 2.2 The formulation of the strategy for 2013-2018 is guided by the present developments in Nepal. Nevertheless, the key elements of the new strategy will remain almost the same, which is to build knowledge on human rights and to train and educate people for awareness creation and to advocate in all arenas for promoting and protecting fundamental rights of the people. Since 2010, INSEC has been working for the skill-development of former-haliyas' children based on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. Within the framework of these key pillars, INSEC has developed strategic as well as programmatic areas and actions for achieving the organisational goals by building on the strategic objectives.
- 2.3 INSEC has evolved out of its own experience and has learned from the feedbacks received from the stakeholders including funding partners, ordinary people, marginalized, underprivileged and disadvantaged communities in identifying its competencies and priority areas. Problems, Issues and Needs (PIN) have always guided INSEC's vision, mission and strategic approach for protecting human rights and democratic freedoms. Collection and dissemination of primary information related to human rights has been the hallmark of INSEC for two decades.
- 2.4 This strategy (INSEC Strategy 2013-2018) has been developed by considering the new developments such as promulgation of a new constitution, federalism, upcoming general elections and elections to local bodies and among others. Additionally, the new developments in human rights, the issues of globalization and changes in international political environment have also been taken into consideration. INSEC's programmes and activities will be revised according to the changes that will take place after the new constitution is promulgated. It might include state restructuring, federalism and rules and regulations related to human rights and the civil society movement.

2.5 In 2012, the INSEC teams at the district, regional to central levels, has agreed to go ahead to begin implementing this strategy for the period beginning July 2013.

2.6 This strategy is subject to revision in accordance with the possible constitutional and political changes in the country.

3. Context Analysis

- 3.1 The decade long armed conflict waged between the Government and then Communist Party of Nepal (CPN-Maoist), since 13 February 1996 formally came to an end with the signing of Comprehensive Peace Accord (CPA) on 21 November 2006. While it may take longer for accounting for the cost of the armed conflict in terms of loss of life and property, there are records showing that over 13,233 people were killed, the whereabouts of 1006 remain unknown and that 785 had injuries¹. Property worth billions of rupees was also destroyed in the conflict.
- 3.2 A 19-day Jan-Andolan II (People's Movement) was launched against the direct and autocratic rule of the king following the 12-point understanding between the Seven-Party Alliance and the then CPN (Maoists). The dissolved House of Representatives was reinstated on 24 April 2006 and the CPN (Maoist) was included in the governance system and also included in the parliament. Further, a ceasefire was declared with the signing of the code of conduct on ceasefire. The CPA and an agreement on Monitoring the Management of Arms and the Armies were also signed between the CPN (Maoist) and the Government of Nepal in November and December 2006. Immediately after its restoration the parliament suspended all royal roles in government and the Interim Constitution replaced the old constitution in early 2007.
- 3.3 The Constituent Assembly (CA) was held on 10 April 2008. The election resulted in a 601-member CA comprising more than one-third women, and a large representation of members from ethnic communities. The CPN (Maoist) emerged as the largest party in the CA that later elected Nepal's first president. On 28 May 2008, the first meeting of the CA ended the 240-year old monarchy in Nepal and declared that Nepal would then on become a republic.

1. Source: Victim Profile published by INSEC (<http://www.insec.org.np/victim/>)

- 3.4 Respecting the sentiments of people and the popular movement, the major political parties reiterated their commitment to the principles of human rights and democracy. However, how they will fulfil the commitments is something that remains to be observed. Nepal has ratified 22 international human rights instruments and many of the commitments will be monitored under these instruments.
 - 3.5 Despite the end of the armed insurgency, the human rights violations and hindrances in the exercise of FoE continue to be recorded in various parts of Nepal. People have been abducted, caused to disappear and have been killed by various groups operating in the Tarai and the hilly areas. Armed groups have also threatened Human Rights Defenders (HRDs), journalists and civil servants, among others. Though there are no restrictions on FoE, HRDs and journalists have been receiving routine threats, have even been killed and or caused to disappear for reporting human rights violation and for disseminating the information. Threats have not ceased for HRDs and journalists even in the post-conflict period.
 - 3.6 There were 99 incidents of violations of rights of the journalists in 2011. Of them, 25 incidents involved direct physical attacks, 28 involved threats, and 15 involved mistreatment. Similarly, seven journalists were arrested, one was abducted while there were four attacks on media houses, and five instances when press freedoms was obstructed and media vehicles were attacked ².
 - 3.7 In 2011, INSEC monitored a total of 2361 incidents of Human Rights violations and abuses. Twelve people were killed by the State. According to INSEC monitoring, eight people were arbitrarily killed. The government formed investigation committies to probe some of the cases but none of the reports were made public³.
 - 3.8 Discrimination based on caste, gender, ethnicity and sex, which has been practiced in Nepali society for long has not ended. A total of 648 women were subjected to violence in 2011. Besides, 379 girls under the age of 18 were affected. The incidents of violence against women including domestic violence, polygamy, rape, alleged practice of witchcraft, sexual violence, trafficking, and attempted rape were recorded in 2011⁴.

2. INSEC's Nepal Human Rights Yearbook 2012 (Page 437)

3.9 The civil society movement in the country remains fractured and therefore has been unable to function in accordance with the people's aspiration and sentiments. This has contributed towards weakening the human rights movement. Therefore, human rights, including FoE, and the rights of HRDs remain under constant threat.

3.10 The overall political context of the country is fragile and may remain the same for some more years. The mistrust among political parties has resulted in a decline among the faith the people had in them for establishing sustainable peace. Likewise, uncertainty over the mechanics of federalism and state restructuring, and the evolving demands of ethnic groups have resulted in movements that threaten the establishment of peace and the promulgation of a new constitution.

3.11 The bill on the TRC and a Commission on Disappearances, as agreed upon by the parties to the 2006 CPA, remain stalled in parliament. Calls by senior political figures for blanket amnesty have intensified in spite of the Government's commitments to accountability made under the UPR process. Individuals suspected of involvement in human rights abuses have been appointed to official positions or have been promoted. The criminal justice system has also been hindered by political interference and this has caused it to be ineffective in combating impunity.⁵

3.12 Nepal's HDI is 0.458 which puts it in a rank of 157 out of 187 countries in the world⁶. The low HDI indicates that Nepal lags behind in several sectors and faces major challenges in terms of establishing a fair and equitable society.

7. Working Modality

Research-Action-Organization (RAO)

- 7.1 Research-Action-Organization (RAO) model shall remain INSEC's modality to foster its mission and implementation of strategies.

People-to-People Approach

- 7.2 The overall objective of the INSEC is to protect and promote human rights for social justice in Nepal. A people-to-people approach is fundamental to INSEC's working modality. Past experiences have shown that it is an effective means to reach out people from diverse communities for effectively addressing their problems, and needs with their active participation in mitigation measures. INSEC has been encouraging people to forge desired connections between the local and national levels for achieving attitudinal and institutional improvement.

8. Theory of Change (ToC)

- 8.1 A Theory of Change (ToC) shall be applied while designing INSEC core programmes and projects. ToC simply is about writing down what change is expected to happen and how that change might come. It links outcomes and activities to explain 'how' and 'why' the desired change is expected to come about.

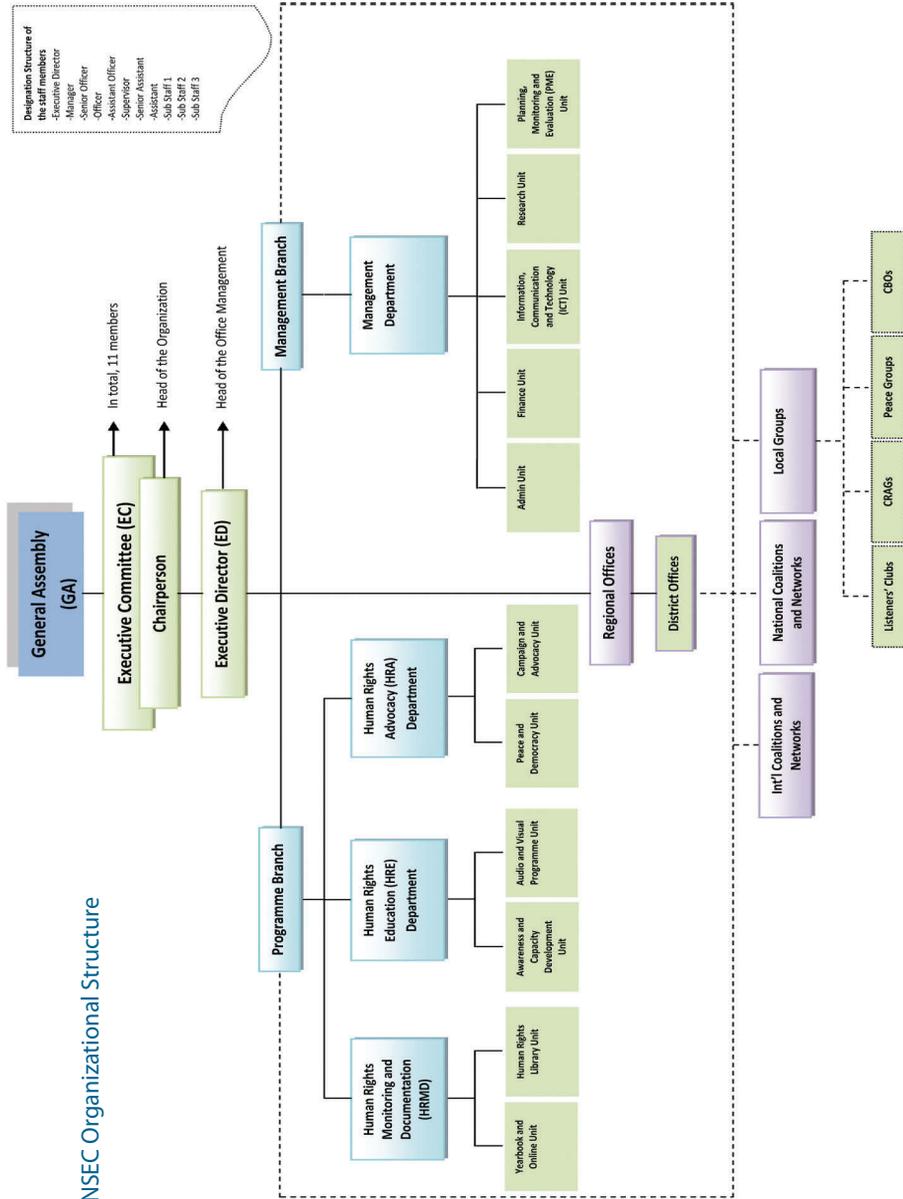

9. Expected Outcomes

- 9.1 People, government, law enforcing agencies and concerned stakeholders made aware on human rights situation and respond accordingly.
- 9.2 People, government, law enforcing agencies and concerned stakeholders adopted human rights principles in their work and act accordingly.
- 9.3 Government agencies, political parties and concerned stakeholders adopted democratic principles and public accountability for good governance and sustainable peace.
- 9.4 Human rights friendly policies and laws promulgated and refined by the government in compliance with international human rights instruments.
- 9.5 Institutional capacity and competencies enhanced by upgrading the existing systems and adopting new ones to meet good governance standards.

10. Operational Strategies

- 10.1 The operational strategy is organised into four thematic areas. Each of the areas enjoys functional autonomy while being practically interlinked through the adoption of a common intervention framework.
- 10.2 The aforementioned intervention priorities correspond to intervention framework. The intervention priorities support to the achievement of objectives of the organization by contributing to
